Zhejiang Tailong Commercial Bank, established in 1993, is a joint-stock city commercial bank headquartered in Taizhou, Zhejiang Province, China. As one of China's most vibrant provinces for private businesses and micro-and-small enterprises (MSEs), Zhejiang's unique market environment has provided fertile ground for the rise of commercial banks like Tailong.

Currently, Zhejiang Tailong Commercial Bank employs over 10,000 staff members. After years of development, the bank has expanded from a local financial institution into the Yangtze River Delta—China's fastest-growing economic region—as well as provinces such as Hubei, Fujian, Guangdong, and Shaanxi, operating more than 400 branches. By the end of 2023, its total assets exceeded 300 billion yuan, with sound asset quality.

Tailong Commercial Bank adopts "micro and small enterprise (MSE) finance" as its core strategy, specializing in financial services for MSEs, self-employed businesses, and urban and rural residents. It holds a significant market share in China's MSE lending sector. Additionally, the bank remains committed to inclusive finance, focusing on underserved grassroots customers, particularly in Zhejiang's counties and rural areas.

Over the years, Tailong Bank has explored credit service models and risk management techniques tailored to China's MSE sector, establishing differentiated competitiveness through flexible and efficient services. By recruiting top talent, honing professional expertise, and actively learning from international peers, the bank has evolved with the times, becoming a vital financial pillar for China's MSE economy.

In collaboration with Zhejiang Industry and Commerce University, Tailong established the Tailong School of Finance. Recognized by scholars as a classic case of "microfinance with Chinese characteristics," its business model was once included as a Harvard Business School case study.
